"Suck to it."

George L. Heard of High Tower, Georgia writes: "Eczema broke out on my baby covering his entire body.
Under the treatment of the family physician he got so bad he could not sleep for the burning and itching.
We used a box of Banner Salve on him and by the time it was gone he was well. The doctor seeing it was doing him good said, 'Suck to it for it is doing him more good than anything I have done for him.' All druggists.

Given up to Die With Croup.

Mrs. P. L. Cordier of Mannington, Ky., writes: "My three year old girl had a severe case of croup, the doctors said she could not live and I gave her up to die. I went and got a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar, the first dose gave quick relief and saved her life. All druggists.

On her death bed at Cincinnati

Nearly every person needs a tonic medicine at this time of the year to brace up and invigorate the nervous system, to cleanse the bowels, liver and kidneys. Herbine is the best and safe remedy to do this, as it will cure constipation, regulate the liver and enrich the blood.
Price 50 cents.

this been true of coughs accompan-

HE SURPRISED HIS WIFE.

Presented Her With an Easter Dress of Astonishing Design.

"I NEVER was one to tell anybody unpleasant things," remarked old Mrs. Jordan, "but I have relations in law myself, and I feel it my duty to tell you that Henry's brother's wife says she wonders what Henry ever saw in such a dowdy as you that he married her. Not that I think much of Maria Ellis' opinion myself; her father was a retail grocer before ever he was a wholesale one and he used to give short weight. When a father gives short weight in sugar, it's no wonder a daughter gives short weight in truth."
"Maria didn't like your new Easter dress, Miss Ellis," said Miss Towner, deftly catching the thread of conversation. "You've

"HERE'S YOUR NEW EASTER DRESS."

got one, I know, because Sarah True, the dressmaker, said she was making it; for some reason, she seemed amused about it."

"Was she?" Mrs. Ellis straightened the Battenberg mat on the table before she proceeded. "Well, she'll not be amused when I've got through with her; I've got to have it out with somebody!"

"Seems to me, there's more real comfort in having a thing out with your own husband than with any dressmaker that ever lived," said Mrs. Jordan.

"There is—usually." Mrs. Ellis' cheeks were red as the paper roses on her mantlepiece. "Henry and I had a pitch battle over my Easter dress. How was I to know that his rheumatism was bad, that he'd lost money in an investment and his typewriter had corrected his spelling the day I told him I must have it!"

"Humph," snapped Miss Towner, "men say women have no brains and then they expect 'em to know everything without being told."

"They do," agreed Mrs. Jordan. "I've hinted about Easter dresses myself."

"We said so much that day that we hardly spoke for a week afterwards," went on Mrs.
Ellis. "Then I made up my mind to have that Easter dress, anyhow, and it was easier to be pleasant. Henry got pleasant, too, but though he'd had a big stroke of luck he never said Easter dress."

"He thought your old one would do; that's all a man knows about dress," said Miss Towler.

"Henry thinks he knows a great deal about dress," sighed his wife. "After we'd been married five years he'd still tell me how I ought to have my clothes made.
Well, being mad, I got a real expensive Easter dress without saying a word. I didn't let Sarah True make it, because I was afraid she'd blurt it out to him."

"Then Maria Ellis was only jealous, not critical," said Mrs. Jordan.

"My dress, a beauty, came home Saturday and was locked in the spare room. Somehow, I didn't feel so good, if I had my own way. The way that new dressmaker piled on extras in the bill was awful. It looked as if the only thing that wasn't extra was the running up of the seams!"

"But you wore it to church to-day?" asked Miss Towner.

"I did not. When it was time for church I walked Henry with a big bundle. He looked sort of cheap, and said: 'Say, Em, here's your new Easter dress!'"

"But," gasped Mrs. Jordan, "how—"

"That was what I wondered until he opened the bundle, saying, proudly: 'I knew I'd been mean, so I just selected you the handsomest dress money could buy and had it made the right way. I always knew I had good taste in woman's clothes!'"

"But what sort of a dress—"

"The kind of a one you'd love to see the woman you detested most wearing Easter morning," said Mrs. Ellis. "But I looked into Henry's happy face, and—well, I felt so mean for the things I'd thought and the thing I'd done that I kissed him and wore that dress to church, feeling like a cross between a martyr and a sneak thief. But I'll tell Sarah True what I think of her for making a thing like that!" she added, firmly.
